Thinkingunderinfluences.com is an on-line quiz conceived as a rhetorical point to deconstruct what currency means and what else could it embody if it was following the essence of what is have been thought for; being an agreed upon value of exchanges.

Thinkingunderinfluences.com proposes to follow this argumentative reasoning with ourselves to find our truth within our hopes of what our exchanges should be based on. As we follow the truth that we increment into the quiz as variables come pragmatistical questions on how this could be implemented. Indeed, it is not a so comfortable process as you come to question such as how “Do you think products could be exchanged through a GENEROSITY (example of an incremented value) currency? But for an optimist spirit; all question has a future and a path:

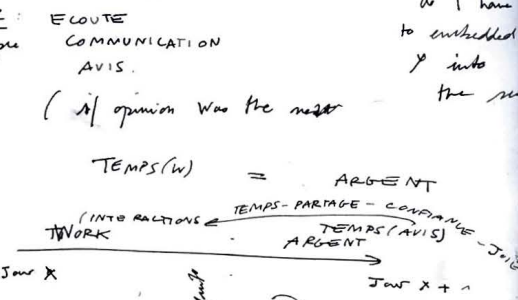

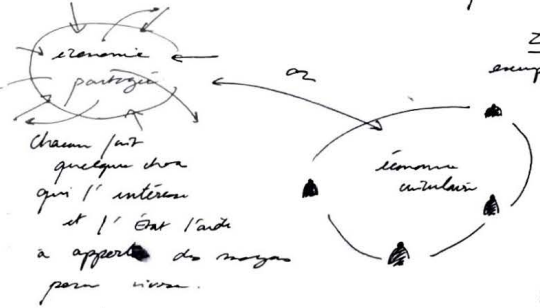

1. “What do you think interaction should be based one?”

This project was thought through as following Rodrigo de Benito Sanz class on coding as studying at the International Center of Photography, from which I graduated last June. The name of this quiz comes from a personal joke; as by opposing the thinking under the influence of the system that made us use to think a certain way; I’ m just proposing you another thinking under influences; as all the questions are designed as if the answers will be mine; except there are changed through the central/main word of the sentence. What I would say to defend this irony: that the ideal could be to think through the more experiences of mind corruptions as possible so that you then have to create your own system of beliefs otherwise you felt as if into a tornado in the ocean.
